Lineage—The right ancient Cheshire family of Grosvenor derives its surname according to tradition from the office of le grosvenour or chief huntsman in Normandy (Collins' Peerage). In the celebrated Scrope and Grosvenor Controversy in the Court of Chivalry in 1385, Sir Robert Grosvenor affirmed his right to the arms, azure a bend or, borne by his ancestor, Sir Gilbert Grosvenor, when he came to England with the Conqueror. of Sir Robert Grosvenor, the defendant. Though the right to the arms was denied to him, his descent as set forth above was allowed in several subsequent Heralds' Visitations, and in the works of Collins, Ormerod, and others.

WINCHESTER.

The Marquess of Winchester (Henry William Montagu Paulet), Earl of Wiltshire and Baron St. John, lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum co. Southampton, president of Hampshire Terr. Hampshire regt.; hereditary bearer of the cap of maintenance; b. 30 Oct. 1862; s. his brother as 16th marquess 1899; m. 23 Feb. 1892, Charlotte Josephine, widow of Samuel Garnett, of Arch Hall, Meath, and dau. of Col. John Stanley Howard, of Ballina Park, co. Wicklow. His lordship is premier marquess of England.

Lineage—This family is said by Collins to derive its surname from the lordship of Paulet, Somerset, but it appears by Collinson's History of that county, that Walter de Dowai owned this lordship at the time of the CONQUEROR, and that from him it descended to the Paganels, Fitzhardings, Gaunts, and Gournays. It is certain, however, that the Paulets enjoyed, from a very early period, a manor in the parish, and hence doubtless took their surname.

Of this duke, Burnet says, "This year (1699) died the Marquis of Winchester, whom the King had created Duke of Bolton. He was a man of a strange mixture. He had the spleen to an high degree, and affected an extravagant behaviour; for many weeks he would not open his mouth till such an hour of the day when he thought the air was pure. He changed the day into night, and often hunted by torchlight, and took all sorts of liberties to himself, many of which were very disagreeable to those about him. He was a man of profuse expense, and of almost ravenous avarice to support that; and though he was much hated, yet he carried matters before him with such authority and success, that he was in all respects the great riddle of the age." Lineage—It is the opinion of Sir William Dugdale that this family is descended from a common ancestor with the Herberts, Earls of Pembroke; namely, Henry Fitz-Herbert, chamberlain to King HENRY I.; and Leland says: "The Finches, that be now, say that their proper name is Herbert, and that with marriage of the Finche's heir, they took Finche's name. One Vincent Finch, in HENRY IV.'s days, recovered by a suit the manor of ——, by Winchilsea." And in an old inscription in Braborne church, the name is written Herbert, alias Finch.

Lineage—There still remain in England a few families, and Wolseley of Wolseley is one, that can prove by authentic evidence an unbroken descent from Saxon times, and shew the inheritance of the same lands in the male line from a period long anterior to the Norman conquest. A legend in the family narrates that their ancestor was given the lands of Wlselei (now Wolseley), for destroying wolves in co. Stafford, in the reign of King EDGAR, when wolves were finally destroyed in England. A pedigree compiled by Sir Richard St. George, Clarenceux, temp. JAMES I., and carried down to 1692, by Peers Mauduit, Windsor Herald, traces the family from

SIWARDUS, Lord of Wlselei, co. Stafford, who is shown by a deed sans date to have been father of

WILLIAM DE WLSELEI, who as "Willielmus, filius Siwardi Wlselei," confirmed to Stephen Davenport lands in the town of Wlselei. His son, RICHARD DE WLSELEI, granted his part of the Mill of Wlselei as "Richardus, filius Wilielmi de Wlselei." He had two sons, Stephen and Ralph.

STEPHEN DE WLSELEI, the eldest, is shown by a very ancient deed to have been father of

ROBERT DE WLSELIE, called in that deed "Robertus, filius Stephani de Wlselsciu." He was Lord of Wlselei, and was father of Lineage—The family of WORSLEY, or DE WORKESLEY, as it was anciently written, is of high antiquity, being descended it is stated in an old family record from Sir Elias de Workesley, lord of the manor of Workesley (now Worsley, about seven miles from Manchester), at the time of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. The Worsleys continued to hold large possessions in Lancashire till the reign of JAMES I. Prior to this it is certain the family of whom we are now treating were in possession of the Worsley estates, and resident at Worsley Hall in the 3rd of HENRY VIII. (1507), when Sir James Worsley, a younger son of Robert Worsley, of Worsley Hall, m. Anne, heiress of Sir John Leigh, of Moes, in Dorsetshire, and their descendant fell in for the lease of Apuldercombe Priory, in the Isle of Wight, to which estate Robert Worsley succeeded about the year 1590. His descendant, Sir Richard Worsley, of Apuldercombe, was created a baronet, 29 June, 1611, which baronetcy became extinct on the death of the 11th Bart., 10 Jan. 1825 (see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetcies). The manor of Hovingham, in Yorkshire, was purchased by Sir Robert Worsley, the head of the Lancashire house, 7 April, 5 ELIZABETH. The Worsleys of Hovingham were of the old Lancashire stock, and retained, and still enjoy, certain manorial rights, and other quit and chief rents, over the several manors and uninclosed lands, so long held by their progenitors in the county of Lancaster.

The immediate ancestor of the present possessor of Hovingham,

THOMAS WORSLEY, of Hovingham Hall, m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Henry Arthington, of Arthington Hall, in the co. of York; and dying 3 May, 1715, left (with a dau. Mary, wife of Francis Foljambe, of Aldwarke, ancestor of Francis John Savile Foljambe, of Osberton and Aldwarke) a son and successor,

THOMAS WORSLEY, of Hovingham, b. 16 Nov. 1686; m. in 1718, Mary, eldest dau. of Sir Thomas Frankland, 2nd Bart., by Elizabeth his wife, dau. of Sir John Russell, Bart., by Frances his wife, 4th dau. of the Protector, OLIVER CROMWELL. By this lady (who was bur. 4 Sept. 1722) he had issue,

Mr. Thomas Worsley was bur. 2 March, 1750. His elder son,

THOMAS WORSLEY, of Hovingham, b. 22 Nov. 1710, was for many years member of Parliament for the borough of Calne, and was a distinguished cultivator and patron of literature and the arts. He held the office of surveyor-general of the Board of Works under the auspices of his Majesty GEORGE III., from whom he received many flattering marks of royal favour. The family mansion house at Hovingham was designed and built by this gentleman, and was enriched by him with an extensive library of classical and scientific books, together with a fine collection of pictures and various other works of art. The Baron Wrottesley (Sir Victor Alexander Wrottesley), of Wrottesley, co. Stafford, and a baronet; b. 18 Sept. 1873; s. his father as 4th baron 1910.

Lineage—Recent investigations amongst the public records have shown that this family were originally named de Verdon, and they are doubtless a younger branch of the baronial house of Verdon of Alton, whose arms they originally bore. Between 1160 and 1167, Adam, abbot of Evesham, enfeoffed Simon, son of William de Coctune, in the manors of Wrottesley and Livington (Loynton), in Staffordshire, for which Simon released to the abbot all claim to Morton and other lands in Worcestershire. This deed was witnessed by Bertram de Verdon, the baron of Alton, and by Ruellen and Guy de Verdon. Simon was a younger brother of Ralph de Cocton or Coughton, in Warwickshire, and grandson of Ralph, the brother of Walter, the first Norman abbot of Evesham. On the Pipe Roll of the Exchequer of 1167, Simon is returned as having paid a fine of half a mark set upon Wrottesley by the justiciary of the forest. He was living in 1172, but was s. before 1199 by his son,

WILLIAM DE VERDON, who relinquished his French patronymic and assumed the surname of de Wrottesle. He m. Ingrith, the dau. and co-heir of Robert FitzAdam, of Waterfall and Butterton-on-the-Moors, and dying about 1242, was s. by his son,

Sir Hugh having joined the insurgent barons under Simon de Montfort, was one of those whose estates were confiscated after the battle of Evesham, and subsequently redeemed under the dictum of Kenilworth. He m. Idonia, dau. of Ralph de Perton, and was s. by his son,

He was a person of considerable note in the reign of that monarch, and a staunch adherent of Richard Neville, Earl of Warwick. In 1470, he was one of the suite of the Kingmaker and the Duke of Clarence who were proclaimed traitors, and a price was set upon his head. In 1471, when Richard Neville restored HENRY VI. to the throne, Sir Walter held Calais as the Earl's lieutenant, and after the death of the latter upon the field of Barnet, surrendered the fortress to King EDWARD IV., upon condition that he and the garrison should receive a full pardon for all offences. Family of Wynn.

To the House of Gwydir, now represented maternally in one of its branches by the WILLIAMS-WYNNS of Wynnstay, must be conceded the first rank in Cambrian genealogy. This eminent family deduces male descent through their immediate ancestor, Rhodri, Lord of Anglesey, younger son of Owen Gwynedd, Prince of North Wales, from Anarawd, King of North Wales, eldest son of Rhodri Mawr, King of Wales. This last monarch, the descendant of a long line of regal ancestors, succeeded to the crown of Powys on the demise, in 843, of his father, Mervyn Vrych, King of Powys, and by inheritance and marriage acquired the kingdoms of North Wales and South Wales. He was slain A.D. 876, and left, by Angharad his wife, sister and heiress of Gwgan ap Meuric, Lord of Cardigan, three sons,

1. ANARAWD AP RHODRI MAWR, of whose line we have to treat.
2. Cadell app Rhodri Mawr, King of South Wales, ancestor of the sovereigns of South Wales.
3. Mervyn ap Rhodri Mawr, King of Powys, who d. A.D. 900, progenitor of the Sovereigns of Powys.

The eldest son,

ANARAWD AP RHODRI MAWR, King of North Wales, whose palace was at Aberfraw, in Anglesey, d. in 913, leaving issue, 1. IDWAL VACH AP ANARAWD; and, 2. Ellis ap Anarawd, slain in 940 with his brother Idwal. Anarawd was s. by his elder son,

IDWAL VOEL, King of North Wales, who was slain with his brother Elis, in 940, fighting against the Anglo-Danes. By his cousin, Avandreg, dau. of Mervyn, King of Powys, Idwal left, with other issue, an elder son,

MEURIC AP IDWAL VOEL, who was taken prisoner in the defeat sustained in 977, and deprived of his eyes by Iago, who suffered him to languish in prison, where he d. leaving a son,

IDWAL AP MEURIC, who was in 992 raised by the people to his hereditary throne of North Wales, of which he had been dispossessed by Meredyth ap Owen, King of Powys. In the following year, Swane, a Danish chieftain, landed in North Wales, and Idwal in resisting him was slain. His only son,

IAGO AP IDWAL, excluded from the throne by Llewelyn ap Seisyllt, husband of Angharad, Queen of Powys, was restored in 1021, on the decease of that prince. Iago ap Idwal, who was slain in 1037, in a battle fought between him and Griffith, King of Powys, son of Llewelyn ap Seisyllt, left an only son,

CYNAN AP IAGO, excluded from the throne by Griffith ap Llewelyn, who also usurped the kingdom of South Wales, Cynan ap Iago, after two gallant and unsuccessful attempts to recover his crown, d. leaving an eldest son,

GRIFFITH AP CYNAN, who, after several ineffectual endeavours to reinstate himself in his dominions, which had been usurped by Trahaern ap Caradoc, formed an alliance in 1079 with Rhys ap Tewdwr, Prince of North Wales, for the vindication of the rightful succession. The two princes met Trahaern on the mountain of

Carno, where an action ensued, which terminated in the defeat and death of the usurper, and the restoration of Griffiths and Rhys. Griffith ap Cynan bore as his ensigns, gu., three lions, passant, in pale, arg., armed az. He d. in 1136, at the age of eighty-two, and lies buried on the south side of the great altar in the cathedral of Bangor, having reigned fifty-seven years. This monarch m. Angharad, dau. of Owen ap Edwin, Lord of Tegaingl (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry, OWEN of Bettws), and had issue, 1. OWEN GWYNEDD; 2. Cadwalader ap Griffith, Lord of Caerdigan, who d. 1172, a distinguished participator in the events of his times. Griffith ap Cynan was s. in the throne by his eldest son,

OWEN GWYNEDD AP GRIFFITH, Prince of North Wales, a chivalrous and distinguished monarch, who, after a popular reign of thirty-two years, d. in Dec. 1169, and was buried at Bangor. Owen Gwynedd (who bore, Vert, three eagles displayed, in fesse, or) m. twice; 1st, Gwladys, dau. of Llowarch ap Trahaearn, Lord of Pembroke, and was, by her, father of IORWTHER DREWYNDWN AP OWEN GWYNEDD; excluded from the throne first by his illegitimate brother Howel, and subsequently by his brother David, son of Owen Gwynedd by his second marriage. Iorwerth, who bore, Sable, a lion, rampant, within a bordure, engrailed, or, d. at Pennant Mehangell, in Montgomeryshire; he m. the Princess Margaret, dau. of Madoc, Prince of Powys, and was father of an only son.

LLEWELYN AP IORWERTH, surnamed The Great, who, in 1194, demanded, and obtained, without struggle, his hereditary crown of North Wales from his uncle David ap Owen Gwynedd. This monarch, after an eventful reign of fifty-six years, d. in 1240, and was buried in the abbey of Conway. His grandson, LLEWELYN AP GRIFFITH, the last native Sovereign Prince of Wales recognised by the English monarchs, was slain at Builth, in the valley of the Wye, 11 Dec. 1282.

Lineage—The surname of Pelham was assumed from a lordship in Hertfordshire. This lordship of Pelham is recorded to be a part of the possessions of WALTER DE PELHAM, in the 21st of EDWARD I., and it is believed that his ancestors held it prior to the Conquest. From the earliest period it is certain that the family enjoyed very high consideration; and its members have, in different reigns, distinguished themselves as warriors and statesmen.

SIR JOHN DE PELHAM, a gallant soldier in the reign of EDWARD III., shared in the glory of Poictiers, and the capture of the French king, JOHN, for which exploit he had, as an emblematical badge of honour, the buckle of a sword belt, which was used by his descendants in their seals (the buckles being placed on either side of their crest, a cage allusive to the captivity of the French monarch), or (quarterly with the Pelham arms) as a coat of honourable augmentation. Sir John had certain lands and houses in Winchelsea, in marriage with Joan, dau. of Vincent Herbert, alias Finch, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN PELHAM, K.B., M.P., constable of Pevensey Castle. This eminent person represented the co. of Sussex in parliament, and enjoyed great influence at the court of HENRY IV. From Sir John we pass to his lineal descendant,

SIR WILLIAM PELHAM, who m. 1st, Mary, dau. of Sir Richard Carew, of Beddington, Surrey, and by that lady had two sons and a dau. He m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of William, Lord Sandys of The Vine, lord chamberlain to HENRY VIII., and had by her,

1. WILLIAM (Sir).

2. Edmund, lord chief baron of the Exchequer in Ireland, 1602-1606.

His 3rd son,

FIELD-MARSHAL SIR WILLIAM PELHAM, who settled at Broclesby, co. SPIRITUAL LORDS.

 Archbishops and Bishops being Diocesans, bear the arms of their Sees impaled with their own family arms, without crest or motto, and with a mitre over the shield; while all other Bishops bear their family arms only, with a mitre over the shield. The mitre of both Archbishops and Bishops is (with the exception of that of the Bishop of Durham) exactly the same. It is a high golden cap, enriched with jewels, pointed and divided at the top, with fringed pendants hanging from the lower part; each top is surmounted by a cross, of which cross the more ancient and probably more correct form is as in the above engraving; the present usual form of the cross, however, is that of a cross-pattée. The mitre of the Bishop of Durham differs from that of the other Prelates in being encircled with a ducal coronet. As to the designation and rank of Archbishops and Bishops, see ante, INTRODUCTION.

In this section the editor has not given all the Bishops of the Established Church of England, but only such as hold English Dioceses or are acting under commissions as Bishops Suffragan.
